A COHDS 'Community Member' is any individual whether they are an affiliate of the Centre, connected to COHDS in an official or unofficial capacity, have used the Centre's facilities in the past, or are brought to the Centre through academic pursuits. This includes academic researchers, students, affiliates, community-based researchers, core members, individuals representing organizations with affiliations, and educators. Those completing research at the Centre for Oral History and Digital Storytelling Archives are subject to the following rules and regulations:

- COHDS materials may be used for research purposes only unless otherwise permitted by a Director;
- Access to interviews may be limited to five (5) interviews or less at a time;
- Community Members must respect the welfare of the collection's materials, COHDS equipment, other users, and COHDS staff;
- The Director must be made aware of the use of any COHDS archival material in research for, or the creation of, any publication(s) or audio/video production(s) before use and such use must be properly referenced¹;
- Community Members may not copy or reproduce material from the COHDS collection, either in part or in whole without first confirming restriction levels with the Archives Coordinator or a Director;
- Community Members must respect the confidentiality of each interviewee as outlined in their Interviewee Consent Form.

Those completing research at the Centre for Oral History and Digital Storytelling Archives understand and agree that any confidential information shared during the course of their time at COHDS/CHORN MUST be kept confidential. Community Members agree to respect the confidentiality of each interviewee as outlined in their Interviewee Consent Form. Wherefore, the signing parties acknowledge that they have read and understood their agreement in full and voluntarily accept the duties and obligations set forth herein. Those who fail to respect these limitations may have their archival access privileges revoked.
